Heroism in Humble Life.

BY ANNIE SAWYER DOWNES.

A June sun shone hot and glaring on a low brown house that stood very near the high road in one of the farming districts of New Hampshire. Not a tree nearer than the field, which by the way, was called the " orchard," but a few straggling morning c'ories and one or two astors, (known to the mistress of the house as " China oysters,") in a box under the window, told that even here were some dim, ill-understood vearnings after beautiful objects. While the gastric juice has a mild, bland sweetish taste, it possesses the power of dissolving the hardest food that can be swallowed. It has no influence whatever on the soft and delicate fibres of the living stomach, por has it any upon the living hand; but at the moment of death, it begins to eat them away with the power of the strongest acids.

There is dust on sea and land, in the valley and on the mountan top; there is dust always and everywhere. The atmosphere is full of it. It penetrates the noise-some dangeon, and visits the deepest, darkest caves of the earth. No palace door can shut it out: no drawer so secret as to escape its presence. Every breath of wind dashes it upon the open eye; and yet that eye is not blinded, because there is a fountain of the blandest fluid in nature incessantly emptying itself under the evelid. which spreads it over the surface of the ball, at every winking, and washes every atom of dust away. But this liquid, so well adapted to the eye itself, has some acridity, which, under some circumstances, becomes so decided as to be scalding to the skin, and would rot away the eyelids, were it not that along the edges of them there are little oil manufactories, which spread over their surface a coating is impervious to the liquids necessary for keeping the eyeball washed clean, as the best varnish is impervious to water.

The breath which leaves the lungs has been so perfectly divested of its life-giving properies, that to rebreathe it, unmixed with other air, the moment it escapes from you, would cause immediate death from suffication : while, if it hovered about us, a more or le would be occasioned. But it is made of a nature so much lighter than the common air. that the instant it escapes the lips and nostrils, it ascends to the higher regions, above the breathing point, there to be rectified, renovated and sent back again, replete with purity and life. How rapidly it ascends, is beautifully exhibited any frosty morning.

But, foul and deadly as the expired air is, nature, wisely economical in all her works and ways, turns it to good account in its outward passage through the organs of voice. and makes of it the whisper of love, the soft words of affection, the tender tones of human sympathy, the sweetest strains of ravishand make up again. For the Patriot.

There'll never be Peace with Slavery. BY F. M. ADLINGTON-WEYMOUTH.

An eve to the future-an eye to the past, Will picture the map where our destiny's cast; Since slav'ry and freedom can never agree, We must bow to the yoke, or resolve to be free. Yield nothing to traitors, excepting a grave, For there'll never be peace while the land holds

Our armies may scatter the whole Southron host And the rebels be driven from pillar to post, Their cities and scaports submit to our sway, And however unwilling be forc'd to obey, But still plotting treason their conq'rers they'll brave. For there'll never be peace while the land holds a slave.

That bone of contention can never be shared-They have forced it upon us whenever they've dared; But we'll never partake of an evil so vile, Nor submit to a nuisance so sure to defile; Then root out the curse, if your country you'd

For there'll never be peace while the land holds a slave.

The justice of Heaven is seen in our case-We have helped to uphold, if we did not em brace:

The crime we permitted has brought us this woe, And we suffer alike with our lunatic foe; But the land must be purged, or be liberty's grave, For there'll never be peace while the land holds a slave.

Declare then at once, for the blessings of peace, For the good of our country, that slav'ry must cease:

The smiles of high heaven would rest on the deed. And our land from the worst of all evils be free'd.

Let freedom's pure banner triumphantly wave, by punctual attention to business to merit a share of their patronage. All kinds of For there'll never be peace while the land holds a slave.

The chief of our choice has the power-the wil Is doubted, the' doubting we hope for it still; Should he dare the brave deed, the whole world would exclaim:

That a Lincoln's is equal to Washington's fame, And our flag by all nations respected would wave As a banner that owns not a tyrant or slave.

Then peace, smiling peace with her magical wand.

Attended by plenty, would compass our land; And the rebels be taught that 'tis useless to fight 'Gainst the fing that's uplifted for freedom and right-

Again would they welcome that flag of the brave, For there'll surely be peace when the land has the subscribers having formed a Copartnerfor most EXTRAORDINARY CURES in ALL ship will nereafter carry on the WheetSTAGES OF CONSUMPTION. It is recom-

My Mother .

BY N. P. WILLIS.

My Mother's voice! How often creeps Its cadence on my lonely hours. Like healing on the wings of sleep, Or dew on the unconscious flowers. I might forget her melting prayer, While 'wildering pleasures madly fly; Bet in the still, unbroken air, Her gentleness comes stealing by; And years of sin and manhood flee, And leave me at my mother's knee.

I have been out at eventide, Beneath a moon-lit sky of Spring.
When earth was garnished like a bride,
And night had on her silver wing; When bursting buds and dewy grass, And waters leaning to the light, And all that makes the pulses pass With wilder sweetness, thronged the night; When all was beauty, then have I With friends on whom my love is flung, Like Myrrh on wings of Araby. Gazed up where evening's lamp is hung-

And when the beauteous spirit there Flung over all its golden chain, My Mother's voice came on the air, Like the light dropping of the rain; And resting on some silver star, The spirit of a bended knee, I've poured a deep and fervent prayer That our eternity might be-To rise in Heaven, like stars by night, And tread a living path of light

Anerdates.

A school-mistress, on her way to school, overtook one of her scholars, a little girl of five years, crying bitterly. What is the matter, my dear? inquired the lady; what are you crying about?

'Cause I don't want to go to school, ma'am ! And pray why do you not want to go? you know you'll never become a lady unless you go to school and learn your lessons ! The ambitious little miss then sobbed out :

I like to go well enough, but I don't want Oyster & Bowling Saloon ! to go now-'Cause I've got no hoops!

I rise, sir, for information, said a very grave member of a legislative body, who then made no great figure in the business in which he was engaged, but has since far out-grown in political importance both his own and his neighbor's expectations.

I am very glad to hear it, said a bystander. for no man wants it more.

An Irishman in a time of revival joined the church, but was found sinning grievously not long afterwards. Didn't you join the Methodists? inquired a piously disposed person.

A Hard Wind.

The Western States have been visited with numerous hurricanes of late years, sometimes demolishing entire villages, leveling forests, and doing immense damage generally. The town of M-, in lowa, was once visited with one of these squalls; and among other antics performed on that occasion was the following, which I tell as it was told to me; and the reader can attach any degree of credence to it that he deems proper:

Old Peter H -- lived in a one-story wooden house of not very extensive dimensions; and when it was subjected to the force of the wind, its powers of resistance were insufficient to withstand so great a pressure, and ever it was not upset or torn to pieces, but merely moved a few rods. In the course of its journey, the stove was upset and the fire spilled out, and the danger of a conflagration moment, he called out to his wife :

blowed the well clear out of the lot! There is not so much as a stone left!"

The cold sepulchral parlors of New York, from May until November, bring disease not only to visitors, but to the visited; for coming in from domestic occupations, or from the hurry of dressing, the heat of the body is higher than natural, and having no clock or hat on in going in to meet a visitor, and having in addition but little vitality, in consequence of the very sedentary nature of town life, there is very little capability of resist-

The points now used in punctuation were introduced into writing gradually, some time after the invention of printing. The Greeks had none, and there was no space between their words. The Romans put a kind of division between their words, thus: Publicus came into use latest, and was only a perpendicular figure or line proportionate to the size of the letter. Poetry.

For the Patriot. The Fourth of July, 1862.

BY F. M. ADLINGTON-WEYMOUTH.

Once more to guard her flag, once more 'Tis Freedom calls again; Again to fight her battles o'er And break oppression's chain.

Rebellious sons of patriot sires Contend against her laws; Have quench'd their fathers' altar-fires, Renouncing Freedom's cause.

Then lift her holy flag again, And fling it to the gale-Where justice follows in her train, She ever will prevail.

The men who urge their vassals on, Rebellious war to wage, May be before the strife is done The victims of their rage.

Our course is plain, 'tis onward still Where Freedom meets a foe; A sacred duty to fulfil, And lay oppression low.

'Til traitors witness to their cost, 'Tis all in vain to try Contention with a loyal host, Who fight for Liberty.

Then wave our starry flag on high; Where Freedom claims the soil; "Tis nobler 'neath that flag to die Then live the traitors' spoil.

On this our day of jubilee, May all our banners wave, Signals that conq'ring Liberty Gives Freedom to the slave.

A Petition to Time.

Touch us gently, Time ! Let us glide adown thy stream Gently-as we sometimes glide Through a quiet dream ! Humble voyagers are we, Husband, wife, and children three-(One is lost, an angel, fled To the azure overhead !)

Touch us gently, Time! We've not proud nor soaring wings: OUR ambition OUR content, Lies in simple things. Humble voyagers are we, O'er Life's dim, unsounded sea, Seeking only some calm clime— Touch us GENTLY, gentle Time!

Skedaddle

The shades of night were falling fast, As through a southern village passed A youth, who bore, not over nice, A banner with the gay device, Skedaddle!

L'eeped, like an acorn from its sheath. While with a frightened voice he sung A burden strange to Yankee tongue, Skedaddle!

He saw no household fire, where he Might warm his tod or hominy; Beyond the Cordilleras shone, And from his lips escaped a groan, Skedaddle !

" O stay," a cullered pussun said, "An' on dis bosom res' your hed!" The Octoroon she winked her eye, But still he answered, with a sigh, Skedaddle !

" Beware McClellan, Buell and Banks, Beware of Hallack's deadly ranks !" This was the planter's last good night, The chap replied, far out of sight, Skedaddle !

At break of day, as several boys From Maine, New York and Illinois, When moving southward, in the air They heard these accents of despair, Skedaddle!

A chap was found, and at his side. A bottle showing how he died, Still grasping in his hand of ice, That banner with the strange device, Skedaddle !

There in the twilight, thick and gray, Considerably played out he lay; And through the vapor, gray and thick, A voice fell like a rocket stick, Skedaddle !- Vanity Fair.

Anerdates.

A young man in the country, who had the felicity of waiting upon a fair damsel home from a party, took the opportunity, while searching for the door latch, to inquire whether she was courted!

Why, replied she with ingeniousness and a smile; I'm sort of courted and sort o' not, but rather more sort o' not than sort o'.

morning.

In a few minutes Biddy returned, with the information that Mrs. Jones was just seventy- as new. two years, seven months and two days old.

Judge Jeffries, of notorious memory, pointing with his cane to a man who was about to be tried, said :-There is a rogue at the end of my cane. The man to whom he pointed, looking at him, said : At which end, my lord.

A miser on being asked why he had married a girl from his own kitchen, said : The union is attended with a double advantage, as it saves me not only the expense of a wife but the lax on the servant.

Will you take some grapes, monsieur asked a gentleman of a Frenchman. No, sare, he replied; I don't swallow my wine in ze shape of pills.

To my Mother.

The following touching lines were found in the pocket of one of the boys that was killed in the late battle, at James Island, June 16th, 1862, and have been kindly forwarded to us for

I think of thee when night shades fall, And our camp is hushed in sleep; I think of thee when the bugle call Rouses me from my slumbers deep-

Those slumbers cheered by dreams of thee, And of the happy hours we've past; And by thy side, I seemed to be, Ah! happiness that cannot last.

I think of thee in the midnight hour, When I pass the Sentry's lonely beat; And swiftly pass the gloomy hours, While I enjoy those memories sweet.

And when I join the wild affray, And messengers of death fall fast, And through our ranks Death cuts his way, While wildly rings the bugle's blast-

I think of thee; and thy dear name Shall nerve my arm, and steel my heart; And for the sake of thy loved name, I'll bravely try to do my part.

And if I fall amid the slain, The thought of thee shall make me feel Less keen the agonizing pain, And death shall softly o'er me steal.

The Printer's Love-

We love to see the blooming rose. In all its beauty drest, We love to hear our friends disclose The emotions of the breast.

We love to see the ship arrive Well laden to our shore; We love to see our neighbors thrive, And love to bless the poor.

We love to see domestic life, With uninterrupted joys; We love to see a happy wife, With lots of girls and boys.

We love all these-yet far above All that we ever said, We love what every printer loves, TO HAVE SUBSCRIPTIONS PAID.

Any delinquent subscriber who can resist an appeal like the above, surely must have the heart of a brickbat and the soul of a grindstone. Lest there be any such, however, totally indifferent to the printer's love, we add the follow ing verses of malediction :

And may the wicked who refuse To pay the printer's bill, Be forced to travel without shoes, Right up a flinty hill !

And never may they turn about, Or sit down on a rail, Until the money they shell out And send it on by mail.

Keep up a Good Heart.

Keep up a good heart ! and look forth to the morrow. Don't turn to the past, it may serve to depress; The ills of to-day, for the future will borrow A summer of gladness to strengthen and bless.

Be firm as a rock that in ocean is planted, Be brave as the tempest that faces the storm, Go forth with the step of a hero undaunted, Keep home for thy compass, and life beating

Keep up a good heart, it is useless repining, See glimpses of light on the track of life yet; Be hoping and striving, not always divining A pathway to sorrow with thorns all beset 'Tis better to watch for the rainbow that shineth In beauty beyond, where the winds are at rest. Each cloud hath a fragment of silver that lineth To temper misfortune, and maketh us blest.

Anerdates.

When I was a boy, my father determined one Sunday to send me to a Singing School. Never having sung much, I thought I would try a little before I went. So up I went to the great chamber, and after locking the door, went to singing as loud as I could bawl, and as musical as I was able. After I had been at it some time, up came father. Sam, says he, what are you doing, making such a noise on Sunday?

Nothing, sir, said I. When he was gone, I went singing again. Presently up came the old gentleman again. Sam, you blockhead, you, what are you doing there, I tell you, making such a noise on Sunday?

Nothing, sir. Yes you are, you blockhead, I've heard you sawing boards this half hour. I've had no occasion to sing any since.

The Mourner a-la-mode.

BY JOHN G. SAXE.

I saw her last night at a party, (The elegant party at Mead's,) And looking remarkably hearty For a widow so young in her weeds; Yet I know she was suffering sorrow Too deep for tongue to express,-Or why had she chosen to borrow So much from the language of dress?

Her shawl was as sable as night; And her gloves were as dark as her shawl-And her jewels, that flashed in the light, Were black as a funeral pall; Her robe had the hue of the rest, (How nicely it fitted her shape !) And the grief that was heaving her breast Boiled over in pillows of crape!

What tears of vicarious woe That else might have sullied her face, Were kindly permitted to flow In ripples of ebony lace ! While even her fan, in its play, Had quite a lugubrious scope, And seems to be waving away The ghost of the angel of hope

Yet rich as the robes of a queen, Was the sombre apparel she wore; I'm certain I never had seen Such a sumptuous sorrow before: And I couldn't help thinking the beauty In mourning the loved and the lost, Was doing her conjugal duty, Altogether regardless of cost

One surely would say of devotion Performed at so vast an expense, Betraved an excess of emotion That was really something immense; And yet as I viewed at my leisure, These tokens of tender regard,
I thought—It is scarce without measure-The sorrow that goes by the yard !

Ah! grief is a curious passion; And yours -- I am sorely afraid, The very next phase of the fashion Will find it beginning to fade, Though dark are the shadows of grief, The morning will follow the night, Half tints will betoken relief, Till joy shall be symboled in white !

Ah! well! it were idle to quarrel With fashion, or aught she may do; And so I conclude with a moral And metaphor-warranted new: When measles come handsomely out The patient is safest, they say; And the sorrow is mildest, no doubt, That works in a similar way !

On Guard.

At midnight, on my lonely beat, When shadow wraps the wood and lea, A vision seems my view to greet Of one at home that prays for me.

No roses blow upon her chaek-Her form is not a lover's dream-But on her face, so fair and meek, Maternal beauties mildly gleam.

For softly shines her silver hair, A patient smile is on her face, And the mild, lustrous light of prayer Around her sheds a moon-like grace

She prays for one that far away-The soldier called upon to fight-And begs that Heaven in mercy may Protect her boy and bless the right

Still, though the leagues lie far between, This silent incense of her heart Steals o'er my soul with breath serene, And we no longer are apart.

So guarding thus my lonely beat, By shadowy wood and haunted lea, That vision seems my view to greet Of her at home that prays for me.

Friendship.

Say, would you know pure Friendship's power Learn it from vonder broken tower To which the floweret fondly clings, And verdure round a covering flings; Not Time's rude hand, nor angry storm, That lovely ruin can deform.

Thus o'er distress and human woes Friendship her hallowed mantle throws; Her smiles the wreck of age repair, Soothing the rugged brow of care; She cannot stay life's parting breath, But brightens e'en the gloom of death !

Anerdotes.

Lord Townsend, whose good humor was proverbial, was dining at a friend's house, where, among other servants, the coachman waited on the table. In handing a sauce turees, honest John, unluckily spilt part of its contents over his lordship's clothes, who instead of showing any displeasure, jocosely

John, you should take care never to grease anything but your wheels.

A French paper says that a little boy about ten years old, whose father had lately died, on seeing his mother weeping bitterly, hanging over his bed when she believed hun to be asleep, said to her: Mother, will not God be your husband now?

Why do you ask that question, my son? Because you have often told me, that now my father is gone to heaven, God will be my father-and if so he will surely be your hus-

I see, said a young May, that some booksellers advertise blank declarations for sale. I wish I could get one. Why? asked the mother.

Because ma, Mr. G. is too modest to ask me to marry him, and perhaps if I could fill a blank declaration with the question, he would sign it.

A lady who had refused to give, after hearing a charity sermon, had her pocket picked as she left the church. On making the discovery, she said: If God could not find the way into my pocket, the d-l could.

How to Take our Meals.

The tables of the rich and the nobles of England are models of mirth, wit and bonhommie; it takes hours to get through a repast, and they live long. If anybody will look in upon the negroes of a well-to-do-family in Kentucky, while at their meals, they cannot but be impressed with the perfect abandon of jaboer, cachinnation and mirth : it seems as if they could talk all day, and they live long. It follows, then, that at the family table all should meet, and do it habitually, to make a common interchange of high-bred courtesies, of warm affections, of cheering mirthfulness, and that generosity of perish, promotive as these things are of good digestion, high health, and a long life .--Hall's Journal of Health of the evening, Lieut. Col. Guiney, of the 9th Regiment, who on rising was greeted with long and continuous hurrahs. Col. Guiney related many thrilling and touching incidents connected with recent battles in Virginia, which produced great effect upon his attentive listeners, calling forth their patriotism with immense cheers.

One of the new recruits. Charles H. Porter, son of Whitcomb Porter, Esq., being called for, came forward and made an enthusiastic speech, and was loudly applauded.

Eliphalet Stone, Esq, of Dedham, was pext called upon. He congratulated the recruits of Quincy on having an old veteran, -Capt. E. A. Spear-to lead them on. He said in his own town they were obliged to accept of new and untried officers.

The last, but not least among the speakers. was George Newcomb, Esq., formerly of this place. He offered many patriotic sentiments, and was loudly cheered. In conclusion, he said he hoped the young men of Quincy would not be backward, but come forward and enroll their names and thus sustain the honor of his native town. He said his only son had enlisted, first for three months and then, by his advice, for three years.

There is great fear with many because of the large exports of gold now going out of the generally. We were met on the ground by country by every steamer. It is really a part of our produce and the more we export the better. The high price of specie makes a balance in our favor as much as though we were selling breadstuff to Europe at ten per cent above the ordinary price. We have not sent away all the gold we imported last year, and there remains some $250,000,000 in the country, which may be superseded in the currencv if we will adopt the National paper currency, which can be done. Require that our immense exports of breadstuffs shall all be paid in gold and it will return as freely as it went to Europe. Gold follows employed capital and goes as much to create a balance of trade in favor of the exporting nation as to pay a balance against it.

Experience

BY MAJOR PATTEN, U. S. A.

About the world I've journeyed much I've travelled far end near. And my experience is such As you shall shortly hear: I've seen the worst-I've seen the best, Of (so called) human kind, Where all are busily in quest Of what they never find

I've known a man who robbed the poor, And yet was rich himself, And drove the beggar from his door, With plate upon the shelf; I've seen a judge who justice sold Have heard a gamester pray, And known a wife that did not scold Upon a washing day,

I've known a lawyer plead a cause, Who never sent his bill, And known a doctor (not of laws,) Take his prescription pill. And known a tradesman speak the truth. I've heard a parson swear, And known a hackman once, in sooth, Who charged but lawful fare.

I've known a person play at whist, Who would not play at loo; And known an abolitionist, Who did a slave pursue; To lavish on his offspring wild, A miser hoard his gold, And seen a mother leave her child, For stranger's hands to hold.

I've seen a maiden who had slid, Who had a modest air, And seen a belle who (seeming) did Not know that she was fair. Once on a rail it was my lot To get a " passage " free, And on a steamer once I got A decent cup of tea.

And I have seen, once in my life, A husband be it known-Who did not treat his neighbor's wife Some better than his own; And also seen,-I'll be (don't wink) As gentle as I can-Some time ago it was, I think, I saw an honest man.

The Volunteer's Wife.

I knew by the light in his deep dark eye, When he heard the beat of the mustering drun That he never would told his arms and sigh Over the evils that were to come: I knew that the blood of a patriot sire, Coursed through his veins like a stream of fire: So I took his hand,

And bade him go, But he never dreamed That it grieved me so.

Two fair-haired children he left with me, Who lisp his name at eventide-The very hour when upon his knee He used to fondle his pet and pride; Alas! they may never again be blessed By a father's care in the old home-nest; And he never again May hear the tones, Or kes the lips Of his little ones.

I know he has answered his country's call, That his breast is bared at a high command But my heart will break, I know, if he fall In the battle's front, by a traitor's hand; Yet I murmur not, though my tear-wet eyes Attest the worth of the sacrifice. 'Tis a wife's free gift, Two lives in one, In the name of God,

And of Washington.

Perhaps when the maple leaves are red, And the golden glories of harvest come, I shall wake some morning to hear his tread, And give him a warm heart's welcome home To kneel with him in a fervent prayer, Thanking our God for His watchful care, In shielding his heart From the rebel's brand, Who honored the flag

Anerdates.

Of his cherished land.

A son of Erin once accosted a reverend disciple of Swedenborg thus: Mr .- you say that we are to follow the same business in Heaven that we do in this world. Yes, that is in perfect accordance with reason; for the Creator, himself, is not idle, and should his creatures be? Well, then, your honor, do the people die there? Certainly not, they are as immortal as the Creator hunself.

Then I should like to know, yer honor, what they'll find for me to do, I'm a gravedigger in this world.

A lady yesterday found that her trunk had been broken and valuables taken. She called in her servant, a negress of eighteen summers, and accused her of having access to her trunk.

Axes to your trunk, the indignant girl exclaimed; I haven't any axes and never had any; I've nothing but a hatchet to split kindlings with."

The lady considered the girl too innocent to accuse further,

Caleb Whiteford, of punning memory, once observing a young lady very earnestly at work knotting fringe, asked her what she was doing.

Knotting, sir, replied she. Pray, Mr. Whiteford, can you knot?

I can not, madam, answered he. I am going to the post-office Charles : shall

I enquire for you? Well, yes, if you have a mind to, but I do not think you'll find me there, was the reply.

What sort of a sign shall I put up here, Judge? said a young coxcomb of a lawyer, who had just erected an office, a part of which he intended to rent for a grog-shop. I can think of nothing more appropriate, replied the Judge, than Rum and Law by BAILEY & BAXTER,

The First Wrong.

My story opens in a New England sitting

There were three persons present. Le me introduce them in order. First, there was Deacon Holbrook, an old man, not far delayed until the end of the year, then THREE from seventy now, with white hair, a tall, spare form, and decided features. Next, his wife, a motherly old lady, with an expression of calm benevolence on her face as to charm all that knew her. Yet, at this moment. anxiety, grief and entreaty struggled for the mastery. The third figure in the tableau The privilege of annual advertisers is limited was a young man with a frank, handsome face, of years not exceeding twenty, who Att letters and communications will receive stood in the middle of the floor with downcast look, shrinking from the angry words which his father uttered.

Henry, said the Deacon sternly, you have disgraced yourself and me, a deacon of the church. You have embittered the declining years of your parents.

Don't be too hard with him, Deacon Holbrook, interrupted his wife. Remember it is his first fault.

If it were anything else, said his father, still unappeased; but to think that my son should become a gambler! my son who has been so carefully trained in the way he should Poetry.

A Pretty Sermon in Rhyme.

"And be ye kind to one another, tender-enried, forgiving one another, even as God for Store; Charles F. Pierce's Tin Manufachearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."—Bible.

Earth, though a lovely place, Teems with dark care: Clasping each other comes Death and Despair: Sorrows on ev'ry side Frowning we find; Sad hearts need sympathy-Let us be kind.

Love, like the sun, can gild All things below; E'en tinge with golden light Trouble and woe. Few in this world of change Ever find much; Some souls ne'er feel its warmth-God pity such !

Hopeless and heart-broken, Living 'mid gloom, Many are toiling on Down to the tomb: Others are wandering Morally blind; Would we do good on earth? Let us be kind!

What over wealth and fame Soars far above? What is most sweet on earth? Friendship and Love ! Who are most beautiful Who most refined? Those who can pass through life Truthful and kind !

God alone knows what pain Some hearts endure; How they need sympathy, Tender and pure. We oft in thoughtlessness Grief round them wind: Oh! when we can, to ALL LET US BE KIND.

Reading the List

" Is there any news of the war? " she said " Only a list of the wounded and dead," Was the man's raply. Without lifting his eye To the face of the woman standing by " 'Tis the very thing that I want,' she said; "Read me a list of the wounded and dead."

He read her a list-'twas a sad array Of the wounded and killed in the fatal fray; In the very midst was a pause to tell Of a gallant youth, who had fought so well That his comrades asked : "Who is he, pray "The only son of the widow Gray," Was the proud reply Of his Captain nigh; What ails the woman standing near ?

"Well, well, read on; is he wounded? quick O God! but my heart is sorrow sick!" "
"Is he wounded? no! he fell, they say, Killed outright on that futal day But see! the woman has swooned away!

Her face has the ashen hue of fear !

Sadly she opened her eyes to the light; Slowly recalled the event of the fight; Faintly she murmured " Killed outright : It has cost the life of my only son; But the battle is fought and the victory won; The will of the Lord, let it be done ! God pity the cheerless widow Gray, And send from the halls of Eternal Day-The light of His peace to illume her way

The Sabbath.

With silent awe I hail the sacred morn, Which slowly wakes while all the fields are still. A soothing calm on every breeze is borne;

A graver murmur gurgles from the rill; And echo answers softer from the hill, And softer sings the linnet from the thorn, The skylark warbles in a tone less shrill. Hail ! light serene; hail! sacred Sabbath morn The rooks float silent by in airy droves; The sun a placid yellow lustre shows; The gales, that lately sighed along the groves,

Have hushed their downy wings in sweet re The hovering rack of clouds forgets to move,

So smiled the day when the first morn arose.

Anecdates.

As a little four year old boy was being put to bed, his mother said to him: Kiss mamma good night, Johnny. He at first refused, and then inquired: Do lieutenants kiss their mammas? Why do you ask that, my dear? inquired the astonished maternal parent. Cause I'm lieutenant of our company, and Joe Walsh is captain! Being assured that it was not beneath his official dignity to " kiss mamma good night," he thus saluted her, and went to bed.

Do let me have your photograph, said a drake, Dandelion, &c , all of which are so compounded cashing belle to a gentleman who had been annoying her with his attentions. The gentleman was delighted, and in a short time the lady received the picture. She gave it to the servant, with the question : Would you know the original, if he should call? The servant replied in the affirmative.

Well, whenever he comes, tell him I am engaged.

A gentleman called at the house of an honest old lady for the purpose of collecting a small debt. Not recollecting the amount, he said:

Never mind, I will send my bill this eve-The old woman, supposing that he meant his son William, replied: Oh, la! our Sal never set up with any one yet; but Bill's a clever boy, and they may build a fire in t'other room.

Why did you not admire my daughter? eaid the late Lady Archer to a gentleman. Because, said he, I am actually no judge of painting. But surely, rejoined her ladyship, not in the least disconcerted, you never saw an angel that was not painted.

The Mysterious Organist.

A LEGEND OF THE RHINE.

"Kind hearts are more than coronets. And simple faith than Norman blood."

Years ago, at a grand old cathedral overlooking the Rhine, there appeared a mysterious organist. The great composer who had played the organ so long had suddenly died. and everybody, from the king to the peasant, was wondering who could be found to fill his place-when, one bright Sabbath morn. as the sexton entered the church, he saw a stranger sitting at the crape-shrouded organ, He was a tall, graceful man, with a pale but All letters and communications will receive strikingly handsome face, great black, melancholy eyes, and hair like the raven's wing, for gloss and color, sweeping in dark waves over his shoulders. Early Walking.

Walking, for young and active people is by far the best exercise : riding is good for the elderly, the middle aged and the invalids. The abuse of these exercises consists in tamore of less by previous fasting or by mental labor. Some persons injudiciously attempt a long walk before breakfast, under the belief that it is conducive to health. Others will get up early to work three hours at some abstruse mental toil. The effect in both instances is the same : it substracts from the powers of exertion in the after part of the day. A short saunter, or some light reading before this meal, is the best indulgence of that time, paid for his hoe cake, and passed the kind; otherwise the waste occasioned by labor must be supplied by nourishment, and the breakfast will necessarily become a heavy meal, and the whole morning's comfort sacrificed by a weight at the chest from imperfect digestion of food. These observations apply especially to elderly persons who are prope to flatter themselves into the persuasion that they can use their mental or

The ex Queen of Naples, with a train of banished Italian princes and dukes, has arrived in Germany.

Gen. Halleck is one of the busiest and most business-like men at the Capital-as he is one of the most systematic and intellectual in the public service.

Great Britain has now two thousand and seventy-nine steam merchant vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of seven hundred and fifty. eight thousand three hundred and sevents: seven.

When Great Britain fought the first Napo: leon, she made notes of the Bank of England legal tender, and premium on gold rose so high that twenty-one shilling pieces rose to twenty-seven.

There are not so many fighting men in all the rebel States as there are in New York and Massachusetts. The Governor and Council have appointed Ebenezer W. Tolman, Esq., of West Roxbury, a Justice of the Peace for Suffolk and Norfolk Counties. It is estimated that from 15,000 to 20,000 bales of cotton, of good staple, will be sent from Illinois the present year. W. H. Webb, of New York, has contracted to build a steam ram, on the Monitor principle, but with two turrets, with a solid bow half its length. Price, a million and a quarter Extensive orders for iron-clad vessels are now in course of execution in England for the Russian Government.

The Richmond Examiner, of the 22d inst., says that desertions are reducing our (the rebel) army, defying its discipline, corrupting its spirit and morals, and seriously endangering the fortunes of its cause.

The Belfast, (Me.,) Journal learns from a dealer in the wooden-ware line, that there is the now more call for spinning wheels than at any time the past twenty years.

The troops of the national armies are now faring much better than they did last winter and in the spring. More wholesome food is furnished them, and the military regulations are broken through for the sake of saving the army from destruction. Steamer loads of vegetables, - potatoes, tomatoes and truit. go up daily from Norfolk, to drive the scurvy out of the Potomac army.

The wheat crop in Ohio is mostly gathered, ssed and proves to be the best and largest since

The hair dve trade is prostrated. Nobody except some ancient female, has used the ar-Es- ticle since the call was made for all men uneve- der forty-five years of age. Gray hairs are getting fashionable and men grow old suddenly in these times.

Edwin W. Damon and Albert C. Hutchinson, of North Scituate, members of Co. C., U. S. Engineers, are prisoners at Richmond.

Self reliance, we know, is an excellent trait, The Advance Guard of Science, who patiently

Until Time has developed the Truth they proclaim, Deserve a high place, on the record of fame;

And often, in life, as in euchre, I own alone."

But, to " go it alone," you no doubt understand, your hand;

And too often in life, in a similar fix, You depend on such cards to secure you the tricks; So that something too much of the knave may be shown, In the selfish desire to " go it alone."

But the game you describe as a trivial strife, Has a moral to point for the Battle of Life; It is this: when the cards are dealt round, on the stand,

And each player looks anxious into his hand, How bravely your partner ill-luck can resist; If cheered by the sound of your voice, "I'll as-

The Great Galileo, imprisoned and bound, In the midst of his trials this sympathy found; When angry Dominicans hurled at his head, All the wrath on which bigotry's passion is fed, A fair form appeared through the dungeons dim mist. And a daughter's soft voice, whispered low, " I'll assist."

No! No! Higher up on humanity's list

Is he who can cheerfully say, "I'll assist," Then in love; Oh rash poet; if she whose bright eyes, Are gazing in yours with a tender surprise, Should apply to your own case, the moral you've shown,

And quickly tell you" to play it alone,"

With what passionate arder, those lips would be kissed,

Till they murmured once more, the soft word, I'll assist." Then shuffle the pack, cut the cards once again,

And let a new moral awaken your strain; Go! Teach the world, that the Battle of Life May be lightened to all, who take part in the If the generous lesson thus taught, be not missed, And each man, to his neighbor, will say, "I'll assist.'

Capt. Spear's Company.

We are the boys from Quincy town; The boys who fear no foe ! And Quincy sends her quota grand, Unto the war to go.

Let us be men of earnest blood, And prove we are alive-For Quincy sends her quota now, One hundred men and five !

We heard the noble Country's call, No traitor do we fear; And now we'll go to spear our foes-Our Captain is a Spear. Our Quincy did not lag behind, And may her heroes thrive-Behold 'tis Quincy's quota here, One hundred men and five.

Behold them in their glory stand, And for our Union cheer; Each man has got an iron heart, The Captain has his spear; And if we to the battle rush, May we some foe deprive Of liberty for wrong to fight-We are five score and five.

Our spangled banner waves on high, Our Country is our boast; Armed foes must the interior leave. Each his land, fort and coast. We go to fight for Uncle Sam, For Uncle Sam must thrive; For Quincy sends her quota on, One hundred men and five.

The Mother's Mismanagement

Can she who knows a mother's love, And smiles upon her darling child, Forget the love she once has felt, Or banish it with anger wild?

This is a thing so very strange, That one would scarce believe it;
From the same lips distinct is heard,
"My darling boy!" "Oh, confound it."

"Do come to mother, precious dear, She'll give you all that's nice and good. " If you don't mind this very minute, I'll break your head with blocks of wood."

"Sweet one, light of your mother's eye, Joy and hope of your father's heart. "Don't you hear me, you saucy imp! Hold your tongue, I'll make you smart."

" Mother's honey, little sweetie!" Sit on mamma's knee, kiss me, dear." "Dear me, can't have a minute's peace, That little brat is always here.'

"Don't cry, ma's sweet little lamb, He shall have a lump of sugar. " Get out of the way, little plague, Or I'll put you down the cellar.

" Sing a little song, my birdie, No matter what it is about." "Shat up your head, you noisy thing, If you don't want your tongue pulled out.

In after years, that mother oft, Her rained hopes will sadly mourn; But why should she expect to reap The wheat, when only tares she's sown.

Building upon the Sand

'Tis well to woo, 'tis well to wed For so the world has done Since myrtles grew, and roses blew, And morning brought the sun.

But have a care, ye young and fair, Be sure you pledge with truth: Be certain that your love will wear Beyond the days of youth.

For if ye give not heart for heart, As well as hand for hand, You'll find you've played the unwise part, And built upon the sand.

'Tis well to save, 'tis well to have A goodly store of gold, And hold enough of shining stuff, For charity is cold. But place not all your hopes and trust

We cannot live on yellow dust Unmixed with purer things. And he who builds up wealth alone, Will often have to stand

In what the deep mine brings;

Beside his coffer chest and own, 'Tis built upon the sand. Tis good to speak in kindly guise, And sooth whate'er we can;

For speech should bind the human mind, And love link man to man. But stay not at the gentle words Let deeds with language dwell;

Should scatter crumbs as well.

The mercy that is warm and true, Must lend a helping hand, For those who talk yet fail to do, But build upon the sand.

"The Castle in the Air."

"I'faith, this world of ours is a brave world, O'erflowing with divinity and love; And for myself alone, Don Manuel, I ask no better in eternity; I never dream of temples in the skies, But only castles like our gay retreat; Your bowers of a nyranth and asphodel Are well enough-but I prefer the myrtle; And instead of harps, a lover's lute; And for your angels, give me only women; They are all angels, Manuel-wingless angels, And better so, because they cannot fly ! What think you of this Paradise of mine?"

Anerdotes.

An old negro was on his dying bed, some one had done him a great injury, the commis sion of which his faithful minister had labored hard to induce him to forgive. At length when just on the verge of the border land, a strong last appeal was made. Tom, won't you forgive him?

Well, massa, if I'm going to die, I suppose I must; but if I ever get well I'll give him another dig.

A German doctor was consulted by a sick patient, and having called while the doctor was engaged, he wrote his prescription, and threw it down to the sick man in haste, say

There, take that. The patient took the prescription and left. A few days after he returned to the doctor, and reported himself well.

But, said he, I found it hard to swallow, as I never took paper before as a medicine; but I got it down, and am wel!, thank God.

exploits, and wound up by saying : I'm now going home, and shall go for the first time in fifteen months. What does he mean by that? asked one of the company of Mr. Jones. I don't know, said Jones, perhaps the fellow has been in the habit of roosting!

A gentleman, who liked gardening, was one day pruning a branch, and by way of awkwardness, pruned his leg also, by a gash from which the blood ran abundantly. The gardener looked on, raised his eyes and in a melancholy tone exclaimed:

The Soldier to his Mother-

Kiss my little brother and my sisters, and tell them I died for my country.

On the field of battle, mother, All the night alone I lay, Angels watching o'er me, mother, Till the breaking of the day. I lay thinking of you, mother, And the loving ones at home, Till to our dear cottage, mother, Boy again I seem'd to come.

HE to whom you taught me, mother, On my infant knee to pray, Kept my heart from fainting, mother, When the vision pass'd away. In the gray of morning, mother, Comrades bore me to the town: From my bosom tender fingers Wash'd the blood that trickled down.

I must soon be going, mother, Going to the home of rest : Kiss me as of old, my mother, Press me nearer to your breast. Would I could repay you, mother, For your faithful love and care: God uphold and bless you, mother, In this bitter woe you bear.

Kiss for me my little brother, Kiss my sisters, loved so well: When you sit together, mother, Tell to them how their brother fell. Tell to them the story, mother, When I sleep beneath the sod, That I died to save my country, All from love to her and God.

Leaning on the merit, mother, Of the ONE who died for all, Peace is in my bosom, mother-Hark ! I hear the angels call ! Don't you hear them singing, mother? Listen to the music's swell! Now I leave you, loving mother-God be with you-fare you well.

You ask me How I Live-

Living friendly, feeling friendly, Acting fairly to all men, Seeking to do that to others They my do to me again; Hating no man, scorning no man, Wronging none by word or deed, But forbearing, soothing, serving, Thus I live-and this my creed.

Harsh condemning, fierce contemning, Is of little Christian use; One soft word of kindly meaning, Is worth a torrest of abuse. Calling things bad, calling men bad, Adds but darkness to the night; If thou wouldst improve a brother, Let thy goodness be his light.

I have felt and know how bitter Human coldness makes the world, Every bosom round me frozen, Not an eye with pity pearled; Still my heart with kindness teeming, Glad when other hearts are glad, And my eye a tear-drop findeth At the sight of others sad.

Ah ! be kind-life hath no secret For our happiness like this; Kindly hearts are seldom sad ones. Blessing ever bringeth bliss. Lend a helping hand to others,

Smile though all the world should frown; Man is man, we all are brothers, Black or white, or red or brown Man is man through all gradations,

Little recks it where he stands, How divided into nations, Scattered over many lands; Man is man, by form and feature, Man by vice and virtue too, Man in all-one common nature

Speaks and binds us brothers true.

Common Things.

Common is the azure sky. Common flowers are everywhere. Common stars shine out on high: Music of the forest bird Cometh without stint or measure, Friendly smile and loving word, Common are as earthly pleasure; Why from common things then turn, And for the uncommon yearn?

Common is the vital air,

If you must have it, Jane.

There is no must in the case, Harry, Why will you talk so to me, as if I were unreasonable and extravagant?

Mrs. Drayton looked hurt, and offended. I didn't say you were unreasonable and extravagant, Jane.

You might as well have said it, was retorted in a tone of voice far from amiable. I think not. Mr. Drayton spoke in a depressed way, and rather to himself than to

Why, then, did you say if I must have it? asked Mrs. Drayton, in an imperative man-

Now of all things in the world, Mr. Drayton most dreaded what are known as family iars; and he was always ready to make concessions for peace. He could meet outside trouble and stand up bravely even with odds against him, in the life-battle ; but, at home. he wanted rest and peace. And to secure these, he too often yielded things that should have been held firmly. Thence it came to be understood, with Mrs. Drayton and her father. The Richest Man in America-

There is frequently a great deal of talk about millionaires, and rich people, but it is generally the case that when a man is being "cracked up" in this way it is done by special desire, either to give him eclat or to bolster up his waning fortunes. Some twentyfive years ago the name of one Rathbone was in the months of everybody as the Buffalo millionaire. Some people estimated his wealth as high as twenty million dollars, and yet he turned out to be a bankrupt, and was sent to the State Prison for forgery. As an off-set to this, the richest man in America has always taken the utmost pains to conceal his actual possessions. A dozen years ago John Jacob Astor died, giving away seven million dollars to certain public institutions, to friends and to collateral relatives, and leaving the residue of this vast estate to his son, William B. Astor. No one knew the extent of the old man's property, but the payment of these immense legacies was made out of the income of the estate, leaving the principal intact. Wm. B. Astor, the son, is at this moment a much wealthier man than his father ever was. Mr. Astor's income is said to be about two and a quarter million dollars a year, or nearly six thousand a day.

Lumber, Lime and Brick,

We are Coming.

BY F. M. ADLINGTON-WEYMOUTH.

We are coming by the thousands, As our brothers came before; Who well redeem'd their manly pledge On many a field of gore.

From the woodland and the city, From the mountain and the glen; We are coming, coming, coming-Twice five hundred thousand men.

All our bugle notes are ringing, And the cry is still we come; While from ev'ry hill and valley, Echoes Freedom's larum drum.

On the ocean, lake and rivers, Floats the banner of the free; We are coming, coming, coming-The true sons of Liberty.

Lo a million gallant spirits, Arm'd in Freedom's holy cause; To impale the heart of treason, And sustain our Nation's laws.

To protect the World's asylum, In defence of all that's dwar, We are coming, coming, coming-

We are coming, we are here. We are here to fight for Freedom, And where'er our banners wave, By the stars now floating o'er us, We will know no man a slave.

We are coming, will be coming, We who never bent the knee, . Till Maine replies to Oregon, All's well-our country's free.

Until all domestic traitors, Feel the sword they dar'd defy; And foreign nations love, or fear, This land of LIBERTY.

We are coming, coming, coming-We are coming, we are here; Let the rebel tyrants tremble When our earthquake tread is near.

We are coming, coming, coming-And the flag that o'er us waves, Shall adorn the Ark of Freedom, Or enshroud us in our graves.

Autumn.

The purple hills are wreathed In misty, cloudy haze, To herald the approach
Of autumn's golden days.

The crimson roses drooped Beneath the chilly skies, And all the lily-buds Have closed their dreamy eyes.

The flowers have dropped and died, The wild birds' song is still, And shrouds of purple he On river, vale and hill,

Through all the painted woods The Indian summer flies, And misty freighted barks Are drifting through the skies.

A dusky spirit broods O'er ocean, earth, and air, And shadowy, ghost like forms Are gliding everywhere.

I hear the mournful winds Wail through the leafless trees, And whispering echoes come Across the purple seas.

I hear a spirit-voice, Like ripplings of a stream, It whispers to my soul:

" Life is a fleeting dream." May-blossoms in the heart-The morning blushes bright, Snows drift across the May,

Oh, 'tis a fitting type Of all Life's changing years! Soon, soon our paths must lead

Then comes the dusky night.

Across the shining spheres.

Anechates.

The Soldier's Grave-

Touch him tenderly; gently raise The fallen hero; let his praise Sound sweetly through all future days, Lean him against a manly breast, Close to the heart that loves him best, Like a tired traveller taking rest Under the arch of blue.

Then bear him to the sylvan shade, Where dew falls from the drooping blade, Like tears from a sad-hearted maid Whose grief no words unfold. Where the soft wind in sorrow sighs, Among wild flowers whose pleasant eyes, Repeat the beauty of the skies, Starlight and blue and gold.

Brush from his brow the wind-tossed hair, Mingled like cloud and sunshine there. Kiss the cold cheek so pale and fair, In stlent sorrow weep. Fold his white hands upon his breast, And when the day fades in the West Under the green turf let him rest, There let him sweetly sleep.

Dig his grave where the soft green sod By traitor's feet has ne'er been trod, Where sweet flowers are the smile of God For the patriot pure and true. There let a graceful fadeless tree, Emblem of hope and liberty, Arise, his epitaph shall be Sweet flowers, red, white and blue.

Bury him where the brook shall sing His requium, and returning spring Shall come with bloom and rustling wing To deck his grave for aye, And Heaven shall watch with starry eyes That sleep not in the stooping skies. The tomb to which an angel flies To roll the stone away.

Fortune in the Fire-

"Sweet Nora, come here and look into the fire; But don't come too near, or your glances so examine burning Will put it clean out, like the sunbeams, machree!

" Just look 'twixt the bars where that black sod is smoking; There's a sweet little valley with rivers and

Mother Earth ! are the Heroes dead ? Do they thrill the heart of the years no more Are the gleaming snows and the poppies red All that is left of the brave of yore Are there none to fight as Theseus fought, Far in the young world's misty dawn? Or to teach as the mild eyed Nestor taught-Mother Earth! are the Heroes gone?

Gone? In a grander form they rise-Dead? We can clasp their hands in ours-And light our path by their shining eyes, And wreathe their brows with immortal flowers. Wherever a noble deed is done, 'Tis the pulse of a Hero's heart is stirred: Wherever right has a triumph won, There are the Heroes's voices heard.

Their armor rings on a nobler field Than the Greek and the Trojan fiercely trod, For Freedom's sword is the blade they wield, And the light above is the smile of God. So, in his isle of calm delight, Jason may sleep the years away, For the Heroes live, and the sky is bright, And the world is a braver world to-day.

Your Country Calls-Obey.

"Come, boys," I heard our father say, One evening at the door, Let go the corn, let go the hay, And I will toil the more;

A nobler need, a sacred aim, Demands your strength to-day; Then up, and meet the patriot claim-Your country calls-obey !

My heart beat quick-how could I let Dear Charlie go so far? And merry Will, our household pet, My brothers, to the war? But mother rose, with tottering steps, And wiped her tears away-" My boys," just breathed her quivering lips,-Your country calls-obey

Twere vain to urge, when youthful blood Swelled manly hearts like theirs; They looked where Duty beckoning stood-They left a home of prayers. Proudly, I saw them mount and ride,

Nor would I bid them stay; But checked each rising sob, and cried— "Your country calls-obey !" The star of eve was smiling down, And fast the shadows fell; I knew some one had with them gone,

Whose name I shall not tell; How dull and dreary seemed it, then But yet my heart could say-Go, gallant lads, be brave, be men-Go, gallant lads, be some year country calls—obey! "

Your country calls—obey! "

For the Patriot. Now's the Time-

BY F. M. ADLINGTON-WEYMOUTH. Now's the time to aid your brothers,

Forward to the conflict go; Stand not timely urging others-Go yourself to meet the foe.

One in number's but a trifle, Yet from Hist'ry's page we learn, One brave heart and one good rifle May the scales of vict'ry turn.

One more arm in Freedom's battle; One more rifle in the field; One more liberated chattel; May compel the foe to yield.

Tho' mine arm old Time has shaken, With the pen it still can guide; Some to duty may awaken-Rous'd to fight on Freedom's side.

Vict'ry is both coy and fickle, Mast be courted e'er she come; Reapers know to ply the sickle, Is the way to harvest home.

Now's the time-the foeman hovers Round your camps and taunting dare; Girls send off your laggard lovers-Cowards don't deserve the fair.

Mothers bid your sons be arming, Freedom is our coat of mail; Tho' the traitor's hive is swarming, God and Justice will prevail.

0, For a Quiet Spot

It's " O for a quiet spot," A place where the waters sleep, A little farm in the sheltered vale, A home in the forest deep.

A dog for the woodland game, A dollar to spend or keep, A black and a brown and a brindle cow, A horse and a flock of sheep.

A duck and a Gumea hen, A goose and gander too-A turkey proud-the poultry kind, And a pair of doves to coo.

A pig and a yoke of steers, A cat, and a bird to crow, A place for the comfort of them, A place for the rake and hoe.

An axe for the lordly tree, A plow for the stubborn soil; A faith in the promise of good, A strength in a will to toil.

And a kind and gentle wife, A little girl and a boy --O what can equal in life A farmer's fireside joy.

It's O, for a quiet spot ! A place where the waters sleep, A little farm in a sheltered vale, And a home in the forest deep.

Hallowed Ground-

BY THOMAS CAMPBELL.

What hallows ground where heroes sleep? Tis not the sculptured piles you heap In dews that heavens far distant weep Their turf may bloom; Or Genii twine beneath the deep Their coral tomb:

But strew his ashes to the wind Whose sword or voice has served mankind-And is he dead, whose glorious mind Lifts thine on high ! To live in hearts we leave behind, Is not to die.

Is' t death to fail for Freedom's right? He's dead alone that lacks her light ! And murder sullies in Heaven's sight The sword he draws:-

What can alone ennoble fight? A noble cause.

I cannot conceive, my dear, what's the matter with my watch; I think it must want cleaning, was the exclamation of an indulgent husband to his better half, the other day. No, pa, said his petted little daughter, I know it don't want cleaning, because baby and I washed it in the basin, ever so long, this morning. A very diminutive specimen of a man lately solicited the hand of a fine buxom girl. Oh, no, said the fair, but insulting lady, I can't think of it for a moment. The fact is, John, you are a little too big for a cradle, and a little too small to go to church with.

Tough, madam, tough did you say? said chicken. Yes'm, and were I to give my opinion on the fowl, I would say it was old enough to have scratched up the seeds of original sin, when they were first planted.

No cow is desired under five years of age, and she is kept so long as she proves to be a good milker, and when she falls below five or six quarts a day, she is fatted for market, and will bring enough for beef to replace herself with another good milker. There are several of the cows who give fifteen quarts a day at the present time, eight or ten being the average. There must occasionally be some who are dry, and with calf; these are pastured within sight of the estate on a peninsula, where they are easily secured. There are at times thirty or fifty so pastured. The largest number kept is in winter, when there is the greater number of customers for milk, and the yield is nine hundred quarts per day, lessening in summer to seven hundred.

The farm is under the superintendence of Mr. Rice, who understands fully his business, and takes much pleasure in imparting his knowledge to others.

Have you heard the news that I heard to-day? The news that trembles on every lip? The sky is dark again, they say, And breakers threaten the good old ship. Our country calls on her sons again,

To strike in her name, at a dastard foe; She asks for six hundred thousand men, And I would be one, mother. Let me go. The love of country was born with me;

I remember how my young heart would thrill When I used to sit on my grand ma's knee And list to the story of Bunker Hill. Life gushed out there in a rich red blood; My grandsure fell in that fight, you know;-Would you have me shame the brave old blood? Nay, kiss me, mother, and let me go:

Our flag, the flag of our hope and pride, With its stars and stripes, and its field of blue, Is mocked, insulted, torn down, defied, And trampled upon by the rebel crew.

And England and France look on and sneer, "Ha, queen of the earth, thou art fallen low, Earth's down-trodden millions weep and tear, So kiss me, mother, and let me go.

Under the burning Southern skies, Our brothers languish in heartsick pain. They turn to us with their pleading eyes; Oh mother, say, shall they turn in vain Their ranks are thinned from sun to sun, Yet bravely they hold at bay the foe: Shall we let them die there, one by one? Nay, kiss me, mother, and let me go.

Can you selfishly cling to your household joys Refusing this smallest tithe to yield, While thousands of mothers are sending boys. Beloved as yours, to the battle-field? Can you see my country call in vain, And restrain my arm from the needful blow ? Not so; though your heart should break with

You will kiss me, bless me, and bid me go.

Reading the List.

Day by day the list grows longer, And it fills our hearts with dread, While we read the mournful tidings Of the wounded and the dead. Eagerly we scan the column From beginning to the end; Searching for the names of dear ones-

BY FANNIE MORRIS.

Husband, father, brother, friend. Reading on with anxious faces, In our hearts an aching pain, Lest, perchance, the name we look for Shall be written with the slain. Hoping, trembling, yet still watching, Till the sadness of despair Bows us down with grief and anguish,

For our loved one's name is there. There amongst the "killed" we find it, That dear name we loved so well; On the battle field he perished, Fighting bravely as he fell. Can it be? O, Lord, be with us, Give us strength to bear this woe; And in pity look upon us,

Father, for we loved him so. " Slightly wounded in the shoulder," Was the word we read to-day; Whilst we're thankful it was "slightly,"

We can only watch and pray. "Left behind;" no one to help him, None to bathe his aching brow; " Left behind "-perhaps to perish; Would that we were with him now !

" Missing;" and perhaps he's suffering, All alone, with deadly pain;
"Missing!" Can not some one tell us
We shall hear from him again? Oh, the long, the dreadful column, Bringing with it hopes and fears; God be with those gallant soldiers, Bless our noble volunteers !

After All-

BY WILLIAM WINTER.

The apples are ripe in the orchard, The work of the reaper is done, And the golden woodlands redden In the blood of the dying sun, Sits pale in his easy-chair, While the gentle wind of twilight Plays with his silver hair. A woman is kneeling beside him. A fair young head is prest.

In the first wild passion of sorrow,

At the cottage door the grandsire

Against his aged breast, And far from over the distance The faltering echoes come Of the flying blast of trumpet And the rattling foil of drum.

"The end no man can see ; But we give him to his country And we give our prayers to Thee The violets star the meadows, The rose-buds fringe the door,

And the grandsire speaks in a whispe

And over the grassy orchard The pink-white blussoms pour But the grandsire's chair is empty The cottage is dark and still There's a nameless grave in the bal And a new one under the bill,

And a pallid, tearless woman By the cold hearth sits alone, And the old clock in the corner Ticks on with steady drone
